Dear sir or madam,

One of the greater issues affecting corporate compliance with cybersecurity standards is the patchwork of law, both within the U.S. and internationally, which applies to data privacy and protection in various ways. The EU is leading the way this year in crafting a comprehensive data regulation that will apply to all member states, which simplifies compliance efforts for U.S.-based companies working in Europe. I believe the U.S. should strongly consider a federal law with a comprehensive framework that addresses data privacy nationally, to simplify standards and ensure easier compliance with applicable law and consumer sentiment on this topic.

Sincerely,

Preston Bukaty
